FOREWORD

This directory of programs of vocational and technical education in the United States is a pioneering effort. It is the culmination of the cooperative efforts of hundreds of people--in state departments of education, in individual school systems and school districts, in the U.S. Office of Education, and by our Center's staff. The directory provides for the first time a type of information that has been much needed. The directory is not perfect--suffering from some omissions of data, inconsistencies of classification, and inability to report economically all types of data collected. In some measure, these imperfections reflect the variability in methods of keeping information in the several states. Nevertheless, the directory presents much basic information about the number, types, and size of programs in secondary and post-secondary institutions in the United States. The Center is aware that there has been much ferment and change in vocational-technical education, since 1963. This directory will not reflect the total impact of new activities and programs under development. It provides a base for improvements in reporting this type of information in later directories.

The Center wishes to acknowledge especially the encouragement and assistance of Walter Arnold and Bernard Michael of the U.S. Office of Education, the technical services of Max U. Eninger of Educational Systems Research Institute, the administrative guidance of Richard W. Whinfield, Administrative Associate of the Center, and the good work of several members of the Center's clerical and stenographic force, working under the supervision of Sandra Offerdahl.

ORGANIZATION OF DIRECTORY

Part I of this directory presents information about the location of schools in the United States (including Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands) that offer federally-reimbursable programs of vocational or technical education, the fields in which the programs are offered, and the full-time and part-time enrollments by field in fiscal year 1966.

Part II presents a summary of the types of courses in each program field offered in each state and the number of schools offering such courses.

Part III presents a tabulation of the total number of schools in each state offering federally-reimbursable programs, in total, and by each program field.

Federally reimbursable programs of vocational and technical education are offered in several types of schools at several levels of instruction, and to varying classifications of students. Throughout this directory, the schools are listed according to the type of institution offering the program at each level of instruction. The classification used is listed below.

A. SECONDARY SCHOOLS
    1. Comprehensive (or Regular)
    2. Vocational-Technical

B. POST-SECONDARY SCHOOLS (non-college)
    1. Vocational and Technical
    2. Combination Secondary and Post-Secondary

C. COLLEGES
    1. Two-year Colleges (Junior and Community Colleges)
    2. Four-year Colleges (College/University)

NOTES

Procedure: The information reported in this directory was provided by state departments of education in response to a questionnaire devised in cooperation with staff members of the U. S. Office of Education (see Appendix). Differences among the states in method of keeping the requested information, and differences in the reports furnished by the states required the Center in some cases to exercise independent judgments about the classification of some data. Where gaps in information occurred in state reports, direct inquiries were made to individual schools, school systems and school districts. The Center recognizes the many opportunities for and probabilities of error, but presents this directory as a faithful report of the information furnished.

Definitions:

Federally reimbursable programs. The state departments were asked to report data about only those vocational-technical programs that are reimbursable under federal legislation. To the extent that this instruction was faithfully observed the data shows the schools offering these programs regardless of whether they asked for or received federal reimbursement.

School year. The program and enrollment data refers to the 1965-66 school year. (Fiscal year 1966)

Missing data. Eleven states did not report enrollment data, furnishing only the names of schools and programs offered. Schools in these states (except Alaska) were reached by individual inquiry. Thirty-five per cent of these schools did not supply the requested information. This fact accounts for the incompleteness and differences in reporting for these states. The Center chose to report its available information rather than to delay the publication of the directory.

Variations in base of school reports. In some instances, the report of the state departments was based on school districts, some of which contain more than one school. In some, but not all cases, the Center was able to get data from the school districts about the individual schools within them. When this was not possible, the data shown is for the total school district. In such cases, the address used is the address of the education office of the district. If the district was reported as a county with no community address given, the address is shown by the name of the county.

Level of program. The placement of some programs particularly post-secondary (non-college) programs, was difficult because such programs are offered by some secondary schools. In these cases, the Center placed them at the level which was most consistent with its plan of reporting--to emphasize the clientele served by the program.

Home Economics. The enrollments reported for programs in home economics are not consistent from state to state. Some state reports did not differentiate enrollments in regular home economics programs from those oriented toward gainful employment. Because of this inconsistency, the data for home economics programs is much less complete and satisfactory than for other programs.

Consolidation and new schools. Consolidation of school districts under way at the time this data was being gathered will make the reports about a number of schools obsolete. New schools were under construction and are probably now operating. Such developments of course are not reflected in this directory.

GUIDE TO PART I

SCHOOLS OFFERING VOCATIONAL-TECHNICAL PROGRAMS

Part I is a state-by-state listing of schools reported as offering federally reimbursable programs of vocational-technical education in agriculture, business, distributive, health, home economics, technical, and trade and industrial education. Separate alphabetic listings are shown for each type and level of school, using the name of the community in which the school is located in each state. The directory identifies the vocational-technical programs offered by the school, the full-time and part-time enrollments in each program, the total enrollment in vocational programs (full-time), and the total enrollment of the school. The diagram below will assist in reading the lists.
